PRAYER CHAIN ~ Contact Janet Creager at 419-592-5799

Dear Parishioners:

A man walked into a store. He found Jesus behind the counter. He asked, "What do you sell here?" Christ replied, "You name it." "I want food for all, good health for kids, adequate housing for everyone, and abortion to cease." Gently Jesus answered, "Friend, I do not sell finished products here, only seeds. You must plant them and water them. I will do the rest." When Jesus told this parable of the smallest seed in the world, His disciples were feeling low. They had worked so hard and so little had happened. The tiny mustard seed. Though its beginnings are modest, its final height is awesome.

Jesus wanted His disciples to realize that despite their few numbers and the opposition against them a great Church would arise from their labors. Fr. James Gilhooley wrote: the history books show how correct He was. Someone has noted that masterpieces come from the smallest beginnings. From eight notes come every hymn, song, and symphony ever composed. Arguably the greatest piece of music ever written is Beethoven's Ninth Symphony - all of it from eight notes. All literature is born from the twenty-six letters of the alphabet. From them came the Declaration of Independence, the United States Constitution, and the Gettysburg Address. But one does not have to produce masterpieces to have an effect. Small acts make a difference.

Everything must begin somewhere. No one emerged fully grown from his mother's wombs. If Christians could learn to bring together their modest contributions to the commonweal, can you imagine what a force for good we would be for those around us? Jesus is saying to us, "Develop where you are planted." He warns us to that often we quit growing because, as James Tahaney said, we prefer groaning.

Happy Father's Day! Let us pray for our fathers and those who have been a father to us and encourage them to remember that the smallest acts (of faith) can bear much fruit!

Peace,

Fr. Doug

The Catholic School Difference

A new study shows the benefit of demanding student self-discipline.

By: The Editorial Board (The Wall Street Journal)

June 1, 2018 7:02 p.m. ET

For the thousands of nuns who have served as principals at Catholic schools, their emphasis on self-discipline must seem like common sense. But a new academic study confirms the sisters are on to something: You can instill self-discipline in students, a virtue that will help them in their studies and later in life.

The study was conducted for the Thomas B. Fordham Institute by University of California-Santa Barbara associate professor Michael Gottfried and doctoral student Jacob Kirksey. The authors analyzed two waves of national data on elementary school students collected under the Early Childhood Longitudinal Study for the National Center for Education Statistics. They compared children in Catholic schools with those in public schools and other private schools, religious and secular.

The authors found statistically meaningful evidence that students in Catholic schools exhibited less disruptive behavior than their counterparts in other schools. “According to their teachers, Catholic school children argued, fought, got angry, acted impulsively, and disturbed ongoing activities less frequently,” the authors write. Specifically, students in Catholic schools “were more likely to control their temper, respect others’ property, accept their fellow students’ ideas, and handle peer pressure.” In other words, they exhibited more self-discipline.

The authors concede their findings aren't causal, meaning there might be unobservable differences between students in different schools that account for the striking differences they have found. But the correlation is strong between the focus that Catholic schools put on self-discipline and better student behavior. We also know that, especially in urban areas, black and Latino students who attend Catholic schools show higher achievement, higher graduation rates and higher college enrollment than those at nearby public schools.

At a time when the different suspension rates between minority and non-minority students has become a toxic debate, the authors offer three key judgments:

First: "Schools that value and focus on self discipline will likely do a better job of fostering it in children." If other schools "took self discipline as seriously as Catholic schools do, they wouldn't have to spend as much time, energy and political capital on penalizing students" for bad behavior.

Second: "Assuming that these results reflect a 'Catholic Schools Effect,' other schools might consider both explicit and implicit methods to replicate it." The report notes that some "no excuses" charter schools are already doing this, through the curriculum or the way students interact with adults and teachers who model self-discipline themselves.

Third: "Don't underestimate the power of religion to positively influence a child's behavior." Religion isn't the only way to foster self-discipline, the authors emphasize, but it's effective compared to most of the alternatives in channeling youthful energy into productive self-control.

Though the authors offer no easy prescriptions, they do say it is a "tragedy for the nation" that so many Catholic schools continue to close when they are most needed. Their lessons are worth preserving.

FROM THE SCHOOL

Seventh and eighth graders from St. Augustine and St. John Lutheran along with chaperones and Mrs. Deniston toured Philadelphia and Washington DC the first week in June. They toured Constitution Center, the Liberty Bell, and Independence Hall the first day. Our group ate at an Italian restaurant that evening.

After riding to Washington on Wednesday morning they visited the Spy Museum, National Archives Museum, and Arlington National Cemetery where they visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, JFK's gravesite, and watched the Changing of the Guard. That evening we walked to the 9/11 Memorial where each person who lost their life have their own marker as well as the year they were born. There were several young children who lost their lives that fateful day. We also visited Marine Corps memorial (Iwo Jima) and Air Force memorial.

Thursday began with a newer exhibit, the Bible Museum. We were fortunate to visit Senator Jeff Markle from Oregon in his office. He had tickets for us to watch the U.S. House of Representatives in action at the Capitol Building. However, they were only recognizing constituents from their own districts, so it was not what we expected. However, the walk to the gallery was long and winding. After lunch most of the group toured the Holocaust Museum. Later that afternoon, we toured the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. That night, we observed the Vietnam Memorial, Korean War Memorial, and Lincoln Memorial. There were a lot of people there and very congested.

I forgot to acknowledge one other staff member who is leaving us this year. Michelle Weddelman taught preschool and will be returning to her home church, St. John Lutheran, to teach grades 1 and 2. We wish her well!
