Plan a seat ahead... for a seat at the "Chair of St. Peter"...

As the Church mourns the passing of Pope Francis, the world turns its eyes once again to Rome. Even non-Catholics watch the Vatican with curiosity. The bells of St. Peter's Basilica have tolled with solemn weight, as well as the bells of St. Augustine, and soon the doors of the Sistine Chapel will close upon the College of Cardinals, gathered in sacred conclave. As we await the election of a new pope, there is perhaps no better moment to reflect on the symbol that often comes up in times such as these: the Chair of St. Peter. As one walks through the mighty doors of St. Peter's Basilica they make the long trek down the immense aisle. Pause in the transept to admire Bernini's magnificent baldacchino, huge pillar that support the covering that shelters the high altar of the Basilica, then as we continue into the apse where you'll find—below the same artist's alabaster window of the Holy Spirit—the "Altar of the Chair." The central feature of the Altar is another stunning work of art by Bernini—an immense bronze chair, seemingly lifted up by golden clouds and flanked by four giants of the early Church: St. Ambrose and St. Augustine from the West, and St. Athanasius and St. John Chrysostom from the East. Is this St. Peter's original chair? It was once believed to be. The actual origins of this chair are uncertain, but we do know that it was a gift from King Charles the Bald, the grandson of Charlemagne, to Pope John VIII in the ninth century. Studies done on the chair suggest that the oldest parts of it date to around the sixth century. While the dating shows that this chair wasn't in use at the time of St. Peter, it still holds (as a gift from the grandson of a great Catholic king) a crucial place among the glories of St. Peter's Basilica.

Bernini intended, through the sculpture, to illustrate key truths about the papacy: the Chair of St. Peter—borne up by clouds and seeming to float—is sustained by Heaven rather than human aid. The Church Fathers are portrayed holding small loops connected to the Chair, which shows that they offer guidance, but are not supporting its weight. The Holy Spirit, depicted in the alabaster window, sheds His light from above—guiding and illuminating the work of the successors of St. Peter until the end of time.

And now, once again, the Church prays for that same light to fall upon the cardinals, that they may discern the next occupant of Peter's Chair. This seat, both ancient and eternal, reminds us that while popes come and go, the mission remains. The Holy Spirit does not slumber. The Chair stands ready.

While you wait and pray with the Church, reflect on the opportunity of going to Rome next year May 2026 to experience the rich image of this chair. What a great opportunity to experience this. Yes, set aside, and start planning for the journey ahead. (see last week's flyer) – Fr. Jerry

First Communion Sunday... "Love is given... Love is extended... Love is received"!

Congratulations to our First Communicants. I am so proud of you and the accomplishments you have achieved over the last year.

The gospels tell us over and over in so many ways that love means self-sacrifice. We only live the paschal mystery when our own lives emulate the love of Jesus... giving one's self for sake of another.

Today is First Communion weekend, 17 young members of parish family will come to experience his love for the first time in a very personal and unique way. First Communion is an exciting, life-changing event where our young family members become an integrated and adult member of our St. Augustine community. The event marks a threshold in the life of our young people. May Mary, Mother of the Holy Eucharist continue to lead you to Christ, our loving Savior. I congratulate our children and wish to let them know of the support and love that is shared from our parish community.

I, with your families am so happy and excited for your achievements, be assured that our prayers will be with you. Again, congratulations, as you soon experience your First Communion with us, Christ coming to you in very special way. - Fr. Jerry

FROM THE SCHOOL

Our Jr. High students joined students from St. Paul Lutheran School for an amazing class trip to Washington D.C. this week! We had the opportunity to visit the National World War II Memorial, Lincoln Memorial, Korean Memorial, Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the White House, Washington National Cathedral, Smithsonian National Museums, US Holocaust Memorial Museum, Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Thomas Jefferson Memorial, National 9/11 Pentagon Memorial, National Harbor, Marine Corps Memorial, Iwo Jima Statue, Museum of the Bible, Washington Revelations, Arlington National Cemetery and George Washington's Mount Vernon. I pray our students will treasure the memories they made as they move into high school! This principal needs a NAP, but I'm so thankful to have this experience with my students and their chaperones!
